Bonuses typically carry terms and conditions and it is important for players to read the small print before redeeming any type of casino offer. Just like Texas hold'em, all versions of the game are played with five community cards. Like hold'em, the cards are dealt in three rounds, which are the first three cards ("the flop"), the fourth card ("the turn"), and the fifth card ("the river"). These community cards are used by every player at the table. They are combined with a set of cards dealt to each player to help make up the best five-card hand possible. In Omaha, three and only three of the community cards are used for the final hand. In Texas hold'em, a player could use the five community cards to make a best hand, if it fell that way.
