Sportingbet publishes all of their odds using the decimal format that is most popular in Australia. In order to read bets in this format, simply multiply the amount you want to bet by the odds listed. That will tell you exactly how much money you will have if you win your bet – including the initial amount you put on the line. In other words, If you bet $10 on a bet with 4.00 odds, winning will mean that you have $40 – the original $10, plus $30 in winnings. Australia are expected to include all-rounder Mitch Marsh in the team, at the expense of Victorian Peter Handscomb, who has struggled for runs throughout the series, compiling scores of just 14, 36 and 12.
