Playing a game of Keno in Australia need not be intimidating, especially online. Australian players will start with a card, numbered from 1 to 80. This is the same as the balls in the bubble, in 8 rows and 10 columns. Then the player makes their selection on the card. Each number selected is called a keno spot and the card will specify how many numbers the player is allowed to choose. The 'quick pick' option will remove the agony of choice, but the odds remain unchanged. The player has the freedom to place bets of varying sizes and the payout size will depend on how many numbers have been matched, and how much has been wagered per number. It starts to get complicated when players place bets on groups and combinations of numbers. Bonus numbers are also a common addition, also known as 'bull's eye' or a 'booster'. They often cost a bit more to bet on but if the bonus number comes up it could mean a massive return on that bet when you play for real money. The most important detail of European Roulette is that there are 37 pockets on the Roulette wheel. One of these is the single zero pocket, and the Roulette table will be different from American Roulette. Below are a few tips on playing European Roulette.
