Casino customers looking for traditional table games and poker will find Canberra Casino a welcome spot. The site's gambling floor takes up a little more than 38,000 square feet, a large enough space for the inclusion of poker machines. Electronic gambling machines are available at the casino, though the site is not licensed to host actual pokies. Many attempt to lobby the territorial government of ACT and the government of Australia to allow the site to place poker machines on the floor have been met with consternation from lobbyists who represent the bar and restaurant industry in Canberra. Those areas bring in a lot of income through poker machines, and the concern is that if Casino Canberra starts to host these popular games, income from the machines at the city's many nightclubs and eateries will start to plummet. As of this writing, Canberra's casino is not able to host any spinning reel games. All video poker games are standard 5-card draw games, the player is dealt 5 cards and then given the option to hold or discard as many of the 5 as they wish, before drawing again, and hopefully landing a winning hand. It usually takes a pair, often jacks or better (hence the name of the original game) to win, and the jackpot usually comes when the player deals a royal flush. In casino lingo, "odds" refers to the probability of a certain outcome. To use a simple example, if you turn over the top card of a deck, the odds that it will be black are equal to the odds that it will be red. These odds can be written as a ratio – 1:1. If you gamble on the outcome of the draw, theoretically a win should be paid out 1 to 1. However, this will not result in a profit for the casino or "house." A casino is a business like any other, which needs to earn a profit to survive. Therefore the casino will add certain conditions to the payout to ensure that the odds are skewed in its favor, that is, that players will lose more often than they win. No, not all pokies have a progressive jackpot. A progressive jackpot is a type of jackpot which increases each time a player wagers on the pokie game connected to it. A minor percentile of the wager is attributed towards the jackpot each time a player bets, hence steadily growing the kitty. online casino strategy
