But there is clearly a correlation between a risk-loving personality and being a great poker player. You really have to enjoy taking risks. I am not 100% sure about what that risk element is though. Making a big bet with nothing, is that it? Or is it the variance itself? Even if you are a good poker player you will have bad months or even years. If you cannot live with that you will never reach the top. And even if you are playing for the last cash in your pocket you still need to be able to play your best. There is even a line about that in "The Gambler" song: "You never count your money when you are sitting at the table". I.e. do not let winnings or losses affect your judgement, and I am sure that is easier for risk-lovers. simpsons slot machine game
