While some people have complained that with people becoming more JOMO, more nightclubs and casinos are beginning to close down, as people are opting to stay in. However, with generation debt and other social issues going on, it's no surprise to see the trend of JOMO flourishing, and it gives young people in particular the chance to really focus on themselves rather than being concerned about the antics of their peers. This doesn't mean that people aren't going out anymore. This simply means that they don't care whether they are or not, and they're simply doing what makes them feel good at the time. Ordering a takeaway and sitting on the sofa all night, taking a solo road trip to explore a brand new town, or simply heading online and playing your favourite slots games, JOMO encompasses everything and anything that you want to do. This new trend is allowing people to jump on board, and ultimately be enticed by a great selection of hobbies and interests – rather than only going out to every single party because they don't want to miss the latest gossip or event that everyone is talking about. Doing what you want to do, when you want to do it, is the ultimate freedom, and when you embrace JOMO, you can have just that.
